SOME SWIMMING DONT'S.

SOME SWIMMING DONT'S.

Of the numerous deaths by drowning recorded each day during the hot weather, many, perhaps a majority, could be avoided by attending to a few simple rules. These are some of the rules:
Don't go into the surfadove your waist if you cannot swim.
Don't go in at all if you are told there is danger.
Don't think you know more about the sea than the oldest man on the beach.
Don't imagine because you can swim a little that you are stronger than an ocean wave.
Don't imagine that the swimming is better five hundred yards from shore than it is just outside the breakers. It is not.
Don't imagine that these who beg you not to go so for really admire you in their bearts. Their thought really is that you are stronger than an ocean wave.
Don't suppose that because sharks and Hermann Oeffelis can swim all day that you can swim an hoar.
Don't go in within two hours after eating. Swimming on a full stomach is often followed by cramps and drowning.
Don't take your cean life, but you ought not not you present the teams with the total that the post of thing its often followed by cramps and drowning.
Don't take your dean life, but you ought not try to persuade a weak swimmer that goes that its and lose their lives. That wort of thing is too much like murder to be pleasant.

SWEDISH PROVERBS.

The heroine of the some was a Scottish maiden, and according to all accounts was beautiful beyond compare. She was one of the four daughters of Fright Robert Laurie of Maxwellten, by his second wife, who was a daughter of Riddle of Minto. One of the riddles, it may be meritioned, was an extraordinary character and on account of habit and strong constitution, was able to carry any amount of Scotch whisky below the belt. One of the Lauries a near neighbor of the Riddles, was also widely faund for his drinking quality and treated her love, with cold contempt, It is said that all his plans, purpose and adorations were of no avail. To prove this and to cap the climax she prove the same dose who never have the cold of the seven treath century. Although he loved, the cold of the seven treath century. Although he loved the was will not all his plans, purpose and adorations were of no avail. Don't forcet. If you are a good swimmer, that good swimmers are drowned oftener than poor ones.

Don't suppose that because sharks and Hermann Oelrichs can swim all day they you can swim an hour.

Don't go in within two hours after eating. Swimming on a full stomach is often followed by emmps and drowning.

Don't take out beyond your depth any man, woman or child who cannot swim. You may risk your own life, but you ought not brisk another's.

Don't try to persuade a weak swimmer to go farther than is safe. Riditeule has made weak men risk and lose their lives. That sort of thing is too much like murder to be pleasant.

MATRIMONIAL TRICKS.

A certain much quoted wise man of old said that "in vain is the net spread in the sight of any bird." But so insid-ious are the snares that are laid to catch eligible suitors that they are too often unsuspected and undesteted, until the fatal matrimonial noose has been tight-ly tied round the victim's neck.

Perhaps in matters matrimonial the air sex is more sinned against than sinting: but on the whole the division of

Not every mamma with a few revolting and marriageable daughters on her hands for discosal is or simple as that dear old ladly who fed her daughters largely on a fish diet, because as she ingeniously observed. "Fish are rich in phospho ous, and phosphorous is useful m making matches!"

It would take us far beyond our present purpose to attempt to sound all the depthse the deceptive whiesof coquetry, dress and "make-up" by which the overtusful of the plain and straightforward male sex are beguined into believing the objects of their—to be forward male sex are beguined into believing the objects of their—to be built the objects of their to be forward on the country of the devotion. These has highly polished and deftly wielded by many, though despised and unused by a few.

Some have gone so far as to say that the word "matrimony" is derived from the fact that the state it names is so much a matter of money ; and certainly a great many of the snares ladi in the path of the unwary bachelors by designing manmas; maidens and widows are financial pitfalls.

saming mammas, maidens and widows are financial pitfalls.

It is generally supposed and not without grounds, that while men in general look twice at a pretty face, and hardly take the trouble to look at a plain one has money she is fairly certain to be married long before the penniless beauty; and of course the wealthy beauty is, so to speak, snapped up before she has time to think seriously on the matter. Hence the importance of money as a bait leads to much painful endeavor to appear well off, and to earn the repute of the possession of wealth, as the repute serves the purpose of bait well enough if it can only be kept up until the fateful words have been said at the altar.
